

A Feisty show in Punjabi by Manohar Khushalani

SA. J. 2/15/51

A feisty show in Punjabi

Manohar Khushalani
Views by The Company

Featuring Gurdita Kaur, Punjabi's vibrant and dynamic folk traditions by Manohar Khushalani, this play opens a new chapter in the history of Punjabi folk art. The production, which opened at the University of Toronto, was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city. The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city.

Although it was a landmark event, it was not the beginning of a new era. The play, which was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city. The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city.

The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city. The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city.

The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city. The play, which is a blend of traditional and modern techniques, was a great success. It was a landmark event, marking the first time that a play of this kind had been staged in the city.