

Tanvir does it again by Manohar Khushalani

ARTS. 14 THE PIONEER THURSDAY OCTOBER 27, 1995

Tanvir does it again

Manohar Khushalani

Chander Chahal

By

THE PIONEER has been the first to bring the Tanvir show to the public. The first show of Tanvir's work was at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. in 1988. The show was a success, and the artist's work was well received. The Pioneer has been the first to bring the Tanvir show to the public. The first show of Tanvir's work was at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. in 1988. The show was a success, and the artist's work was well received.

Manohar Khushalani

The artist's work is a blend of traditional and modern techniques. He uses a variety of materials, including oil, watercolor, and ink. His work is characterized by its intricate details and vibrant colors. The artist's work is a blend of traditional and modern techniques. He uses a variety of materials, including oil, watercolor, and ink. His work is characterized by its intricate details and vibrant colors.

Chander Chahal

The artist's work is a blend of traditional and modern techniques. He uses a variety of materials, including oil, watercolor, and ink. His work is characterized by its intricate details and vibrant colors. The artist's work is a blend of traditional and modern techniques. He uses a variety of materials, including oil, watercolor, and ink. His work is characterized by its intricate details and vibrant colors.