

Original for a Change by Manohar Khushalani

THURSDAY MARCH 24, 1994 THE PIONEER 13

Original, for a change

FOOTLIGHTS
Sindia Nirula

It was an auspicious evening for Manohar Khushalani as the Pioneer's Editor-in-Chief, Sindia Nirula, took him to the theatre to see the play 'Original, for a change' directed by Prasad Rajan.

Based on Vijay Das Sarda's novel, the play is the story of Laxmi Chandra Yadav, a village woman, married off to a rich family in the city. The play is a story of Laxmi's struggles in the city, her search for a better life, and her eventual return to her village.

Laxmi's husband is a man who is a member of the village council. He is a man who is a member of the village council. He is a man who is a member of the village council.

The play is a story of Laxmi's struggles in the city, her search for a better life, and her eventual return to her village. The play is a story of Laxmi's struggles in the city, her search for a better life, and her eventual return to her village.

A meeting and memorabilia presentation (left) took place after the play. Manohar Khushalani (right) is seen with Sindia Nirula (left) and other members of the Pioneer staff. The group is gathered around a table, looking at items on display.